President's Update

Finally, we are seeing consistent and definite signs that the economy has turned around and job growth is underway! The recovery will take time to pick up speed but it is important that we, as developers, make sure our communities participate as effectively as possible.

The CDS can help us be more effective by providing access to successful innovative projects. We can read about these projects in the journal, CD-Cases, and on the CDS Webinars. Really, the only limitation is the time and effort we, as members, are willing to invest in finding ways to make our communities stronger. Many resources are there if we use them.

Perhaps the best strength of CDS is the interaction between practitioners and researchers on CD related issues. We learn from each other when practitioners test ideas that researchers uncover. Especially important is to learn from successful promising practices tried elsewhere.

Each year, the CDS recognizes members' efforts and outstanding programs. It is very important that we all recognize and learn from these efforts. There are many award categories and you probably already know of someone or a program that meets the requirements. The application process is simple but the recognition received can have lasting benefits on others.

Please check the CDS website and follow the directions for nominations. Gisele Hamm, Illinois Institute for Rural Affairs, chairs the Awards committee and can answer specific questions (GF-Hamm@wiu.edu).

USDA Releases New Online Atlas of Rural and Small-Town America

The Atlas of Rural and Small-town America, developed by USDA's Economic Research Service, provides county-level mapping of over 60 statistical indicators depicting the members that did join did so at the last conference and may not have accessed it since that time (information from usage logs would be helpful).

Web site:

The educational component of the site could be enhanced (it currently contains issues of the JCDS and CD Practice and some professional development resources).

Twitter:

There is currently little to no traffic on this medium related to CDS.

Recommendations

General:

- a. CDS would benefit from a formal Communication's Policy that outlines who has authority over, and access to, communications (i.e. postings/updates/public viewing of website, Vanguard, list serve, etc.). Policy should include info on sharing of membership info and the method of asking membership if and how much of their info is shared to other members and the public. The policy should also provide detail on integration of existing social media platforms (i.e. list serve, web site, updates, Facebook, Twitter, etc.). This policy should be written by the Communications Committee and submitted to the Board for approval.

2. CDS Website

- a. Educational resources posted on the website; specific content be discussed and determined by Board.
- b. Move away from existing Ning site and create a blog or discussion forum added to the CDS website where members can add info / statement / comments on postings. Members would decide whether their contact info is visible to the general public or only visible to other CDS members.
- c. Pending a Communication's Policy, include member profiles that are searchable with keywords - CDS membership form would require members to provide 3-5 keywords describing their work and the URL to their personal website, Twitter / LinkedIn info, etc.
- d. Members should be actively encouraged to participate in making or commenting on Blog entries.
- e. Website should allow users to change their logins to whatever they like. Having a cdsXX login ensures that the user will forget the login and stop using the site. (Basic rule of usability is, fewer barriers = more use).

- f. Board Minutes page be updated.
- g. Revolving photo gallery of select pictures and brief explanation from CD conferences, etc be used on website to inform of many on-going activities.

3. The blog / discussion forum site:

- a. The new blog be organized to contain past conference materials (.ppt files, handouts, photos, video, etc.). A link can also be included to a Flickr site with member pictures.

4. Other:

- a. Having steady hash tags for Twitter will allow people to be able to follow other CDS members or topics, thus, CDS encourages members to use standard hash tag (ex. #cds or #commdevsoc) to bring folks together.
- b. Encourage members to use LinkedIn and provide links to their site.
- c. Determine if there is a membership goal to be reached by expanding outreach through social media.

CDS International Committee Update

As the world is rapidly changing, it is incumbent on community development practitioners and scholars to understand and participate in this new emerging global environment. The CDS international committee is working to think more internationally and to be in a position to build our international relationships and support community development around the world.

To this end we are continuing to grow our relationship with the International Association for Community Development (IACD) that we began at our joint New Orleans conference last year. We are excited about our current plans for a joint newsletter with the IACD and we welcome submissions of your international activities to this newsletter. So far we have interest from people around the world who are doing community development work in disaster recovery as well as CD practitioners in the United States who are working to "internationalize Extension" (for example) here in the US.

If you have delivered an international paper/presentation, been involved in an international CD project, or are partnering with an international organization or school tell us about it. We are especially interested in joint projects or participation that resulted from the CDS/IACD meeting in New Orleans.

2011 Community Development Institute East

The 2011 Community Development Institute East will be May 9-13 at the Bridgeport W.Va. Conference Center. The week-long institute is designed to train community officials and volunteers in the techniques of modern leadership and management of community development efforts. It focuses on increasing a community's economic and social growth. The curriculum consists of three, week-long sessions of increasing detail to be taken one-after-another in successive years which are designed to meet the increasing challenges faced by those working in community development.

CDI East approaches community development as both a process and a program. It seeks to develop an individual's ability to identify community problems; set goals; encourage liaison with outside agencies; stimulate community interaction; and bring groups together to support competitive economic development, human resource development and quality of life issues. It does this by expanding an individual's ability to identify community and economic problems, set goals, encourage liaisons with outside agencies, stimulate community interaction, and bring groups together to respond to a wide range of subjects. The institute, founded in 2002, is holding its ninth session. It features a national-level curriculum endorsed by the Community Development Council (www.cdccouncil.com). It is one of six institutes nationally, along with CDI Central (Arkansas), Texas CDI, Northwest CDI (Idaho), and Midwest CDI (Illinois). In addition, it is associated with the Professional Community and Economic Developer certification.

Chesapeake Energy is the featured sponsor of CDI East. The institute is presented by the WVU Extension Service with the assistance of the WV Development Office and the WV Community Development Hub. The early bird registration fee is $600 and includes lunch and breaks each day as well as all learning materials. For more information, contact CDI East by email (CDIEast@mail.wvu.edu) or telephone (+1-304-293-6967) or visit the website (cdi.ext.wvu.edu).
